

Dennis and Linda's E-News

BACK IN SOUTH AFRICA

We went from below freezing temperatures to temperatures in the 90's. American Airlines made us miss our flight to South Africa, and because of the storms earlier in the week, the only way they could confirm a flight was by sending us via Hong Kong. That meant a much harder flight, but we did arrive safely on Tuesday instead of Sunday, and our Luggage arrived on Thursday.

INFORMATION YOU PROBABLY DIDN'T WANT

Since we had a 16 and a half hour flight followed by about 13 and a half, here is how we survived. It helps that we are married. The first flight we had two seats. You can sit traditionally or one can lean on the other. Or, you can pile up pillows and blankets and lay your head in your spouses lap. The second trip we had four seats to stretch out in.

We had some good news when we started examining our stored stuff. We had reported that Linda's jewelry and a Christmas present had been stolen. However, we found that they had just been misplaced in all the confusion with moving out of our house. We are now recovering, checking on shipping, visas, etc. And we are touching base with friends.

One way is each gets two seats. Or lying head to toe, one can get the back of the seats and one the front. (I discovered that if you are in the front you tend to fall off unless you stick one of your feet in a magazine pouch.) If you are interested in more complete information, I will send you complete descriptions including diagrams for $30. Disclaimer: None of the advice will give you much sleep.

Prayer requests:

- The Kimberly Road Church of Christ is going through some difficult times. We had a constructive meeting with them this weekend.
- We are running into problems getting visas for Mozambique. We had hoped to be there in days. Now it looks like it will be weeks. Manuel and Don are hoping we can arrive soon.
- The students are arriving, and classes are beginning in Mozambique. Some of the church families were affected by the floods and cyclone.
- Several short term mission groups are planning to come to Mozambique this coming American summer.
